What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 17?

The German government has distributed a guide for parents to help them prepare their children for the arrival of refugees to the country. In fact, some refugees already have been arriving, in the first tranche of the migration period, which is set to last until the end of 2015. In anticipation of many more arriving, this year's guide is entitled, "Promotions for Sensible Parents Who Want to Take Care of Their Children in the Year 2015". The guide is designed to help parents achieve what it says is "the most comprehensive protection of their children". It highlights that children should be placed in schools in the nearest town to their home, in order to facilitate "the acceptance of children by the surrounding population", which will have a significant influence on their success in Germany. It says that school lessons and sports activities should be taken into consideration when planning placements, and a number of other safety measures are recommended to ensure the security of refugee children, including "the prevention of over-crowding and enabling at least separate toilet facilities for male and female refugees". The guide also specifies that children should only have moderate levels of play, something which should be in line with the "natural development of children" in order to avoid the "development of aggressive behaviour in children". It also points out that all children, irrespective of their religion or race, should receive the same kind of supervision. However, it adds that this should not stop families from offering their children "orientation and their home culture" and that the families should be protected by providing the necessary language skills, or by access to a language course. However, it states that only the responsible and reliable parents should be allowed to teach their children English, something that the document says is crucial to the young refugees' social integration. It also emphasises that refugee children should "avoid taking drugs, such as cocaine". It says, "This is particularly important with regard to the type of children that are arriving at the moment. Children from countries of origin where cocaine is widespread should be protected from this drug." The guide says that parents should also "keep an eye on the media and prevent their children from being exposed to violent, offensive, and pornographic TV shows, films or internet sites." The guide also emphasises that teachers should be
